WINNIPEG, Nov. 18

The Northwest Council has been requested. A reputation has been appointed to visit Ottawa in connection with the Redistribution Bill. A report was adopted to be forwarded to Ottawa asking relief for disabled volunteers and their families of Prince Albert district.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 19

Chester Arthur, ex President of the United States, died yesterday.

It is said that owing to some informality in the Municipal Act polling in Provincial elections in Manitoba, with the exception of Winnipeg and Brandon, will be open voting.

Prof. Saunders is in the country for the purpose of selecting sites for experimental farms. One is to be located in Manitoba and one in the Territories. The one for Manitoba will probably be located in the vicinity of Winnipeg.

Sir John Macdonald and leading members of the Government are holding a series of meetings throughout western Ontario. Blake and Hardy are doing likewise.

It is still uncertain when the Dominion elections will take place.

Gen. Middleton is visiting Winnipeg. He has been inspecting the School of Infantry. This afternoon a military parade will take place at St. John's cemetery. Gen. Middleton will perform the ceremony of unveiling the monument erected in memory of members of the Ninth Battalion who fell in battle.

T. W. Jackson, late member for Qu'Appelle, has returned from Ottawa. He reports that he was successful in his mission respecting Qu'Appelle and Wood mountain Railway.

Goldwin Smith has prepared an address to the electors of Leger as a candidate for the Commons.

Manitoba elections take place on December 9th, nominations on December 2nd. Battle now raging with intensity.

The Ontario Legislature has been dissolved. Polling takes place on December 29th and nominations a week sooner.

Meat services to the late Lord Bishop of Saskatchewan were conducted at St. John's church on Sunday.

Archer, the English Jockey who took his life, was buried with great distinction, members of the nobility acting as pallbearers.

A company has been formed to develop the coal mines at Rand, with a capital of half a million.

Work on the Hudson's Bay Railroad has stopped for the season.

The first through train on the Northern and Pacific Junction leaves Toronto for the Northwest on Saturday night.

The Chicago strike has been settled and the men have returned to work at the employers' terms.

A shiny snow on skates will take place to-morrow afternoon on the lake in the rear of Mr. Hurd's residence, between the Police and civilians.

Mr. Bennett, Government Emigration agent at Brandon, arrived by the last mail. He comes, we understand, to enquire into the adaptability of this country as a field for immigrants. He went to Carleton yesterday in company with Louis Smyth, Assistant Land Agent.

Bishop Grandin arrived at St. Albert on the 20th ult.

Mr. Alex. Stansfield sent a sample of the Red Pike wheat grown by him, and which took the first prize at our recent agricultural show, to the Winnipeg Free Press, and it was shown to the official grain inspector, who said it would easily grade No. 1 hard all through, and that it was of excellent quality.

The Lawyer who wears spectacles should have one of Tom Davis' new Electric Lamps.

We would call the attention of the Council to the necessity of taking some action to prevent cattle running at large and breaking fences. In summer, when there is good grazing, the use of a by-law to prevent cattle running at large is not felt, but now that there is no grass to be had cattle naturally gravitate to waste haystacks, taking in fences on their way.

Pure American Coal Oil 75c at Tom Davis'.

Mr. McTaggart, Land Agent, arrived home by the last mail. He visited the Pacific slope during his absence, and, altogether, spent a very pleasant holiday.

The man who bought a pair of Tom Davis' $1 75 Faced Pants never worked on the Courthouse.

Mr. Wadsworth, of the Indian Department, went to John Smith's reserve, on the South Branch, on Wednesday and returned yesterday. He reports that the Indians had threatened out 450 bushels of wheat and had none to threaten, and that the chief has built himself a new house, while there he visited the school on the reserve, which is taught by Miss Mackenzie. About thirty Indian children are attending it, and all are making rapid progress in their studies.

FRIDAY, NOV. 19, 1886.

THE LATE BISHOP McLEAN.

By the death of the Bishop of Saskatchewan, the central figure of our community has been removed and a gloom has been cast over the whole district where he was so widely known and so universally respected as a man truly of "light and life." The news of his decease passed from lip to lip with a feeling akin to dismay, and we felt with him of old who said, "Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel?"

It is impossible within the limits of a newspaper article to do anything like justice to the career and character of Bishop McLean, or to recite in detail his manifold labours and lengthened services to the country at large and to the Saskatchewan district in particular. In future years, when the time for writing the history of these territories shall have come, he will occupy an honorable place as one of the foremost pioneers in the cause of religion, of civilization and progress. For the present we have thrown together a few particulars supplementary to the remarks in our last issue serving to point out some of the more marked features of his character, and which we believe will be of interest to our readers. We shall leave the duty of producing a more lengthened and careful biographical sketch to able hands though not to more sincere admirers.

We have already mentioned that Bishop McLean studied at the University of Aberdeen. He took a high place in classics and graduated with honours in science at King's College, where he had the Bishop of Rupert's Land for a classmate. When Bishop McLean took charge of the diocese of Saskatchewan, extending from the shores of Lake Winnipeg to the Rocky Mountains, the country was not settled, there were no railways and his first trip from Winnipeg to Prince Albert was made by dog train. Since that time he has travelled much throughout the district, and by every means of locomotion known to the Northwest. At the time he first undertook the work there were only two Churches of England clergy in the diocese, and there was no endowment for the see. To raise funds for this object he visited the old country, and by much speaking and correspondence and in face of great difficulties he succeeded in his object. There is now a large endowment fund and the clergy have increased ten fold.

Bishop McLean, as a native of Scotland, had a share of that "perfidem ingentem Scotorum" which has become somewhat proverbial. He was distinguished for activity and zeal, for perseverance and strength of mind. The duties and cares appertaining to such a vast district as the diocese of Saskatchewan—embracing as it did scattered peoples, totally distinct in race, in language and in civilization—were neither few nor small, and the Bishop was not more than others exempt from disappointments and discouragements, but he met and overcame difficulties and annoyances with admirable courage and with a coolness and equability of temper superior to most men. He had also great talent for organization and in the arrangement of business details, and in the large correspondence naturally entailed upon him he was methodical and painstaking in a high degree. Few men in any country have travelled further and undergone greater labours in organizing and regulating and visiting in the way of duty. In the highest sense of the term the Bishop was public-spirited—he was at all times ready and willing to aid good public measures; but with the wisdom that characterized all his doings he avoided controversy, and though fully conversant with political affairs he prudently stood aloof from party strife. He was also conspicuous for his loyalty. In many respects, indeed, he was fitted to "stand before kings," and during his visit to the old country, where he was held in the highest respect, he lived much in the atmosphere of favour and admiration—it may even be to some extent of adulation—but this had no unsalutary influence on his life and character. These visits indeed were made almost entirely in the interests of his much-loved Northwest and he always returned to his proper work with renewed zest and with increased cheerfulness and alacrity. Like others of his nationality Bishop McLean doubtless loved the "land of the mountain and the flood," but his long residence in the Northwest, his great love for his work and for the people amongst whom his lot had been cast, had so subordinated his earlier impressions that it might be truly averred the land of his adoption was the land of his love—his whole thoughts and efforts were directed to the good of those amongst whom he laboured and he devoted his great abilities, his energy and his life to promote their highest interests.

The late prelate was a man of high scholastic attainments. He was well read in general and in classical literature, and as was well said in the most appropriate funeral sermon, he had "made science a priestess at the altar," but his studies were chiefly Biblical literature, and he was especially well versed in the Bible itself. He was a preacher of the first order, of rare ability and power—and as a teacher and trainer of young men he had few superiors. He was large-souled and liberal minded.

We have spoken of the Bishop in his public capacity only. What he was as a chief pastor to his own flock—what he was to the clergy of his diocese—what he was to his immediate friends and how great his loss to them, we do not feel ourselves competent to estimate. Other good men remain and other bishops will arise, but one in all respects fitted to fill the place of the departed it is difficult to imagine. Into the details of his family life and the inner circle of his most intimate friendships we do not enter, suffice it to say those who knew him best loved him most. There is, indeed, no perfection under the sun, and the conditions of common humanity we know well are adverse to public happiness; but that the Bishop was happy in the discharge of his duties—in the love of his family and friends, and in the satisfaction of a tranquil conscience we are well assured.

In the funeral sermon Archdeacon McKay referred to the Bishop's hourly wish that he might die in harness. His wish has been gratified, and now he is laid to rest in the churchyard of St. Mary's, near the graves of gallant men whose lives they gave for their country, though on a different field. His was a mission of peace and goodwill among men—his warfare was against evil and ignorance, and his battles were fought for the saving of souls. Among all the large assemblages that met to pay the last tribute of respect to the deceased prelate there was not one heart but echoed to the words, "Well done good and faithful servant."

To his mourning relations—to his stricken family—to the bereaved companion of his life, we offer the sincere and heartfelt sympathy of the whole community.

"As sometimes in a dead man's face, To those that watch it more and more,

A likeness hardly seen before, I Comes out—to some one of his race:
"Go, dearest, now thy brows are cold, I see thee what thou art and know Thy likeness to the wise below, Thy kindred with the great of old."

"But there is more that I can see,
And what I see I leave unsaid.
Nor speak it, knowing Death has made His darkness beautiful with thee."

CARD OF THANKS.

Mrs. McLean, in her great sorrow, wishes to offer her grateful thanks to the citizens of Prince Albert for the deep sympathy they have expressed towards herself and family, and the generosity with which they have paid their last tribute to her beloved husband. She wishes also to thank the Rev. Mothers of St. Ann's Convent and other kind friends who sent floral offerings and letters of condolence.

REDISTRIBUTION.

The redistribution scheme adopted by the Northwest Council gives Assiniboia 13 members, Alberta 7, and Saskatchewan 4. The allotment of members to the different districts is all out of proportion, Saskatchewan being entitled to more than four if Alberta is entitled to seven. The reason for Assiniboia being given thirteen is said to be the fear that if Alberta and Saskatchewan combined could outvote Assiniboia there would be a danger of the capital being removed to Calgary. But we can see no grounds for this fear as far as Saskatchewan is concerned, as Regina is much more convenient to us than Calgary would be. It is a spirit of jealousy of the Saskatchewan country is to blame for this, but the time is not far distant when Assiniboia will cease to control the majority of the Legislature. It is a pity, however, that jealousy should have deprived the Saskatchewan district of its fair share of representation at the outset of our career as a province.

OUR DUTY.

The Winnipeg Sun, in an article on "Vote Catching," in which it refers to the hypocrisy and deceit practised by the politicians of to-day, asks—"Is there no one province, no one constituency, no one candidate, who will have the courage to declare independence of such dissimulation, and fight the battle as the polls on real issues?" Would it not be a wise thing for those who are about to seek election to the Commons as representatives of the Northwest to act the people of the east a good example by appealing for support upon living issues—upon political principles? We think it would. Political principles, of course, may underlie all the false issues raised, but it is not a disgrace to the people of Canada that principles cannot be upheld except by the aid of deceit and hypocrisy. The cure for this state of affairs, however, rests with the electorate, and if it will be true to itself at the coming elections of representatives for the Northwest in the House of Commons no man who rests his success on false issues need be elected. As to what are the living issues, the people of Canada and the Northwest know too well to need telling. Let political principles be the watchwords of the opposing parties, and a united front be presented to race and deceit. The welfare of our common country demands this duty of us. Let us fail not.

SIR ADAM ARCHIBALD, who was the first Lieut. Governor of Manitoba, made a powerful speech recently in Truro, N. S., on the Kiel question, in which he showed the position the Liberals are in to-day with regard to Kiel. After citing that Blake once offered $5,000 for the arrest of Kiel, characterising him as a "monster of iniquity," he said it seemed that to the Liberals "One murder makes a villain, millions a hero."

"A Catholic Conservative," writing to the Toronto World, says—"Any person who conceives that Mr. Mercier is a bigot for any other than party purposes is woefully mistaken. Mr. Mercier does not prefer Protestant on toast, but he likes votes well done. Any person who conceives that the gentleman who writes the Mail is a bigot for any other than party purposes is woefully mistaken. Some Orangemen have such a conception of Mr. Mercier. Some Catholics have formed a similar conception of the Mail management. Poor Orangemen—poor Papist! Ye are logical perhaps, but ye are also treacherous. Both factions care more for your votes than for your souls." Just so. They proceed on the assumption that most men are fools and they are not far wrong.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE RIGHT
REV. JOHN McLEAN, LORD
BISHOP OF SASKATCHE-WAN.

A PUBLIC TRIBUTE TO DEPARTED WORTH.

SERMON BY ARCHDEACON McKAY.

On Sunday last all that was mortal of the late Right Rev. John McLean was laid to rest in the graveyard attached to St. Mary's church, and within a short distance of Emmanuel College.

Though His Lordship had died the Sunday previous, owing to the absence of members of his family and their inability to arrive sooner than Saturday last, the funeral was postponed until the day following their arrival, so as to permit of their taking a last look at their departed parent and to follow him to his grave.
The funeral was public one, the citizens of Prince Albert considering that so worthy a citizen, so good a friend, should be borne to his last rest at the public expense, and a committee of management composed of Hon. Lawrence Clarke, Col. Sprat and C. Mair, Esq., were appointed to make the necessary arrangements. An application was made for an escort of Mounted Police, which was cheerfully granted, and the P. A. C.
Band volunteered their services. The St. Andrew's Society, of which the deceased was an Honorary Chaplain, took charge of the body, and men were appointed to guard it night and day.

Sundays morning, broke cold, yet bright, and but for the fog seen floating at half-mast the stranger might have believed that the Angel rather of Life than Death had visited the Royal City. About halfpast eleven the Mounted Police in charge of Superintendent Perry—their coats of red and helmets white, and arms glittering in the sun, and presenting a very soldierly appearance—note through the town on the way to the college, while citizens might also have been seen on foot and in conveyances, making their way from all directions to the same place, and long before the hour appointed for the funeral a very large representation of not only those who were proud to call the dead prelate their chief pastor, but of all classes, had gathered at the same place.

Those who wished to take a last look at the dead prelate were afforded an opportunity of doing so, in the library annexed to the College, where the deceased had been laid out in his coffin, and upon the lid of which were resting three beautiful wreaths, one the offering of the Committee on behalf of the public, and which was made by the Rev. Mother of St. Ann's Convent; one by Mrs. Hart, one by Miss Mair, and a cross by Mrs.
T. J. Agnew.

Sharp at the appointed hour the procession to the grave commenced in the following order:

- Police Escort.
- Band.
- St. Andrew's Society.
- Dr. Bain and Archdeacon McKay.
- Pollicars.
- Body Bearers.
- Body.
- Body Bearers.
- Pollicars.
- Family Mourners.
- Clergy.
- Citizens.

The following gentlemen were the pollbearers—Hon. Lawrence Clarke, C.
Mair, W. Macdonald, C. Adams, T. J. Agnew, R. B. Way, Body Bearers—W. Rogers, A. Flett, G. F. Mills, J. D. Wilson, J.
D. McKay.

During the march to the grave the P. A. C. Band played the Dead March.
On arriving at the church door the Police, St. Andrew's Society and the body were opened their ranks and the body was laid into the church, which was draped in black, followed by the mourners, the Police and as many of the people as the church could accommodate, a great number having to remain outside. Immediately on the arrival of the body in the chancel the services commenced, the choir, under the leadership of Mr. E. J.
Camp, and assisted by the Presbyterian church choir, singing the 76th Psalm we trusting the Rev. Archdeacon McKay then entered the pulpit and preached as follows:

In the 64th chapter of the book of the Prophet Isaiah and the second canon of renewal, you will find the words of God thus written:

"And we all do fade as a leaf."

Almighty God to attract and arouse our attention in our pathway through life.
We all noticed but a short time ago that the trees around us were all clothed with a beautiful foliage, but now the leaves have faded and fallen, and as we behold the naked branches they tell us but too plainly that the leaves are now gone.
The voice of inspiration then brings to our minds the lesson we should learn, and as an infallible teacher bids us exclaim, that "we all do fade as a leaf."

At this present moment perhaps more than any other, the least thoughtful of us can fully realize the truth of those inspired words. The very appearance of our sanctuary to-day—the presence of mourners—the presence of this coffin by my side, and above all, the presence of the great God before whom I stand, give a most awful solemnity and truthfulness to our present theme. We, my brethren, meet with heartfelt sympathy this day at the funeral of our late Chief Pastor.
He, the head shepherd of our Church, has already realized the truthfulness of those prophetic words which we have chosen for our text. His soul has already passed away. It has already severed its connection with flesh and blood, and we doubt not but that it has already passed to light, to freedom and to God who formed it. Yea, dear friends, his soul has soared to the weep and to wait a little longer and has already entered within the veil to see and to serve its Redeemer and its God. Whenever death appears on the stage of the world it always has a most solemn and impressive aspect. It is particularly the case with us at this present moment. Our mighty pastor has indeed fallen in the midst of battle. And as we gaze upon that coffin and consider that the flashing eye which so lately shone forth is now quenched in its forever, and the voice which was ever eloquent in expounding the blessed truths of the everlasting gospel is now silenced in its forever, it is then—at such a moment—that the angel of death seems to be hovering very near each one of us; we can almost, as it were, imagine we hear the fluttering of his wings. At such a time each one of us in this crowded building must if necessity be forcibly reminded that we all do fade as a leaf, and that there is an end of human things, and a beginning of things eternal, inevitably, yet most certain. But sad though this thought be to us all it is none the less full of instruction, because it helps to improve the intellect, the feelings and the character. The singular tribute of respect and grief which now attends the departure of him we mourn, teaches us that our nature is sympathetic and social. The attributes of man as well as the attributes of God are alike explained by Providence, for in order that we may be made pure, thoughtful and useful, God in his providence employs different modes and means of instruction. At one time we hear the voice of Providence as the voice of harpers harping in the streets; at another time as the voice of distant waters, and again as in this present instance, as the voice of a great thunder-clap. One day we are warned in visions of darkness, dis-pair and terror, but these different and varied dispensations correspond, my brethren, to the different and peculiar elements in our nature and are designed by God for their mutual development and perfection. Just as you are well aware the light of heaven visits the earth and illuminates the different parts of the earth at different times, so in like manner my friends does Divine Providence penetrate and illuminate our affections, now, then another, and after that another, till at length the whole soul is leavened, so to speak, with the designs of God its maker respecting it, and is thus brought up into one harmonious whole. And thus it is that we are taught that there is a time for every purpose and for every work, both in the world within us and the world without us. We find the man of wisdom telling us that there is a time to rejoice and a time to lament, a time of war and a time of peace. Surely then, my brethren, this must be to us a time to weep. If, my friends, it is ever accompanied and lawful to indulge in grief and to let our tears of sympathy and affection flow it is, I should think, as we stand beside the remains of a fellow being.
That we should weep, therefore, on an occasion like the present is but too natural, and it is, moreover, in keeping with the example of the Son of God Himself. You will remember that it was by a friend's grave that he once wept tears of affection and love, and that we are made to feel as the living Master once felt is surely our duty as his disciples. By the open grave the pleasures, affections and joys of this world are made to feel as the living
his disciples. By the open grave the
his disciples.

is then hard to put away from us the truth of our text that we all do fade as a leaf. It is said that Alexander the Great wept publicly twice in the course of his eventful career, and one of those occasions was as he looked upon his great army, that covered an extensive plain before him. When he was questioned by a bystander as to the cause of his weeping he replied that "he was thinking that in less than a century not one of this vast multitude will be living except my friends, was a most solemn and appropriate thought and proving the result of deep reflection on the mortality of our common nature. May such a thought occupy our minds, my brethren, at this moment, and may the all-merciful God make us ready for that great crisis, when we, too, shall be summoned to appear before his great white throne. It is, moreover, at such times as the present that we learn our nature is sinful. By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin. This funeral, then, impressively reminds us that the world we live in is a fallen world. But although we are hereby taught the mortality and sinfulness of our common nature, yet have we here also most vividly impressed upon us our common Christianity. Call to mind the comforting words of the great Apostle, "But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning those things that are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope, for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." Let God, then, be thanked and praised that this is no heathen funeral. O what a meeting of despair and wretchedness must be theirs who know not God, for they have no Christian minister to soothe and comfort them. How desolate, my friends, and despairing should we have been to-day without the comforting assurance of the peace giving Gospel. For human wisdom, we all know, has no light, human sorrow has no balm, except as it is drawn from the revealed mercy of heaven. At such a time as the present we have to turn and rely upon our common Christianity for support and comfort. For it is Christianity alone that imparts the bright beams of hope over the grave, and transforms it into a place of glory. And when we hear the hope imparting words of our burial service, "I am the resurrection and the life," saith the Lord: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die," it is then that we cling to them as a precious reality. They appear then to our awakened minds as no mere dream or life fancy, but a divine revealed truth which imparts to our common Christianity its grandeur, its power and its indescribable worth. At such a season as the present, it is unless to speak the praise of the departed one, for we all realize but too keenly our mutual loss, and we must necessarily admit that this bereavement makes in the midst a great gulf and void which to us, in our present finite understanding, cannot easily be filled. For, view him as a preacher and expositor of God's word, and you must feel and realize that your loss in him one who was so conversant with science as to make him serve as a priestess at the altar of religion. And, lastly, when we regard him in that his chief office of all, as Chief Pastor of the diocese, we, my brethren, must all feel that we lose in him one who was ever watchful and anxious for its advancement and welfare. One of his last expressions in me concerning it was to the effect—"That he thanked God for being enabled to make an entire visitation of the diocese before he fell ill." Such words speak the earnestness and anxiety of one who was faithful to his charge—yea, even to death. He always expressed a belief that he might die at his post in harness. It has, my brethren, been granted him. He has truly died in harness, well worn in battles for Christ and for his Church militant. He has fought a good fight, he has finished his course, and has well earned that rest to which, in the Providence of God, he has now been called. And we, my friends, are left to grieve for loving wife, dear children and a diocese bereaved.

At the conclusion of the sermon the choir sang "Forever with the Lord," Archdeacon McKay pronounced the blessing, and the march to the grave, which was situated immediately to the east of the church, and close by the chancel window, commenced. At the grave the usual burial service was read, the public listening with uncovered heads and many with heavy hearts. The Police presented arms as if saluting that stern yet merciful King whose summons all men must obey, and whose presence is only entered through death's portal. The people then dispersed with the exception of the clergy and a few others who waited until the grave was closed over in order to place the wreaths upon it.

In the evening Rev. Canon Flett preached a funeral sermon on the death of His Lordship in St. Allan's church, in which he referred to the eminent services done the church by the deceased, and the great loss it had sustained by his death. A large congregation was present, and the choir rendered appropriate hymns.

ing liquor.

North West Council.

REGINA, Nov. 1.

Mr. Secord presented a petition from some of the residents of Regina asking for a small alteration in the game laws. It was referred to the miscellaneous committee.

A committee was appointed to obtain information and report on the losses sustained through the ravages of prairie fires.

Mr. Secord asked leave to introduce an ordinance amending the game ordinance, which was adopted and read a first time. It merely changes the close season for snipe and plover from the 1st to the 15th August.

Mr. Hughes moved that a committee be appointed to prepare a memorial to the Dominion government asking that a bridge be built over the Saskatchewan. Mr. Secord seconded the motion, which was carried.

Judge Richardson called attention to some mistakes which had been made with regard to the printing of the Civil Justice Bill, and denied that the printer was to blame for the delay. Judge Rouleau said the committee was not to blame either.

Mr. Hughes gave notice that he would tomorrow move for a committee to prepare a memorial to the Dominion Government, asking it to grant pensions to the widows and children of the Prince Albert volunteers killed in the rebellion, and also to those who were wounded at the same time.

Nov. 2.

In the Northwest Council to day, Mr. Hughes moved that a select committee be appointed to prepare a memorial to the Dominion Government asking it to grant pensions to the widows and orphans of Prince Albert volunteers.

Mr. Secord—Way not, instead of placing this motion before a select committee, allow it to go with our batch of memorials to Ottawa.

Mr. Hughes—Your honor—I prefer to leave it to a select committee.

It will accordingly go before the committee.

Mr. Turfitt introduced an ordinance to incorporate agricultural societies in the Northwest Territories.

It provides that when fifty persons have become members paying an annual fee of one dollar to the funds of the society it may become an incorporated agricultural society under the ordinance.

The ordinance gives power to acquire and possess real estate, and to dispose of the same for the benefit of the society.

After some discussion the bill was laid on the table.

Some changes were made in the Civil Justice Bill.

Nov. 3.

Mr. Hughes presented a petition from the Mayor and Council of Prince Albert, asking that the incorporation of the town be legalized. It was referred to the civil justice committee.

[This petition asked for the legalization of everything done by the Council, and has been thrown out by the committee.]

There was a warm discussion on the granting of medals to the Northwest Mounted Police engaged in the rebellion, in which Lord Boyle, Col. Irvine, Messrs. Turfitt and Ross took part. A motion that medals be granted was referred to a committee.

His honor laid upon the table a report of the delegates sent by the Council to Ottawa last session. Also a report from the Secretary of State on the same subject.

His honor also laid upon the table a communication addressed to Mr. Hughes with regard to the High School at Prince Albert. On the motion of Mr. Hughes, it was referred to the school committee.

Mr. Marshall reported that it was the opinion of the committee on fines and penalties that if the fines resulting from the sale of intoxicants within the Territories formed part of the territorial funds, more general interest would be taken in exposing and prosecuting infractions of the law. The committee recommended that the subject be brought to the notice of the Dominion Government, with a view that the His Excellency in council be moved to direct the payment over of all fines recovered under the law named (Dom. Act, 19 Vic., cap. 48) to the general fund of the Northwest Territories.

The report was concurred in.

Mr. Cayley moved a motion, in favor of the introduction of bills in all future elections in the Northwest, and a committee was appointed consisting of Messrs. Secord, Jelly, Hughes, and the mover.

Lord Boyle spoke at some length with regard to the granting of medals to the Northwest Mounted Police engaged in the suppression of the rebellion. He claimed that the Police were as worthy of medals as the militia. He thought that they were even more so. For his own part he could tell the Council that the company in which he served had received scrip and medals yet they never saw a shot fired.

Col. Irvine said the Mounted Police and Prince Albert volunteers were as much entitled to medals as any of the militia. For his part he would do all he could to see that the police got justice.

After some discussion the motion was referred to the same committee as Mr. Hughes's motion.

Nov. 4.

Mr. Turfitt's bill for the incorporation of agricultural societies was received and adopted. It will receive the second reading to-morrow.

Mr. Hughes presented his petition, asking that pensions be granted to the widows and orphans of the Prince Albert volunteers killed at Duck Lake. The petition contained the names of 150 killed and wounded, and short life sketches of several of them. The petition was adopted with applause.

The house then went into committee of the whole on the ordinance respecting the holding of lands in trust for religious societies and congregations. The bill consisted of eleven clauses. No congregation or society shall be capable of holding more than 320 acres of land. On reaching the 11th clause the committee rose.

The house then went into committee of the whole on the bill to facilitate the conveyance of real estate to married women. After clause 5 had been struck out the bill was received and ordered to be engrossed.

Nov. 5.

A vote of thanks was passed this evening by the Northwest Council to the Ottawa delegates—Messrs. Perley, Ross and Wilson—for which those gentlemen returned thanks.
